1901: Gereja Holy Family

"The first Church of the Holy Family in Kajang was consecrated on February 24, 1901, by His Lordship Bishop Rene Fee. The ceremony was conducted in a joyous but solemn manner. The Bishop was greeted by parishioners dressed in their national costumes, and a Pontifical High Mass was celebrated by Bishop Rene Fee. Fr. Gazean MEP delivered the homily in Chinese. After the Mass, there was a firing of crackers, and photographs were taken with the Bishop in front of the newly built parochial house¹.

Although the first church no longer exists, the three stained glass windows, each depicting a member of the Holy Family, still survive and are present in the current church. The land upon which the first church was built was donated by Towkay Goh Ah Ngee, a charitable Catholic gentleman. His Lordship Bishop Rene Fee came to Kajang to lay the foundation stone for the church and dedicated it to the Holy Family. The church had a fine Gothic design with a high bell tower (the highest building in Kajang then) and was the first church in Kajang town in the district of Ulu Langat².

1905: Kedatangan Low Ti Kok

"Low Ti Kok was born in a village called Kuimei, Anxi District of Fujian Province, China. It was then under the government of Manchu Dynasty, i.e. Guangxu 3rd Year according to the Chinese calendar. He arrive in Klang at his youthful age of 20 and later moved inland to Serendah, Selangor where he helped his uncle in his business. Three years later he moved to Kuala Lumpur to seek better opportunities. He managed to make his living and with some savings, he went back to his homeland and married a village lady of surname Lee.

Low Ti Kok arrived in Kajang at the age of 28 and started his venture into alcohol and sundries business. Later, he found tin mining and rubber planting a good business which proof him successful and made him a rich man in town. Mr. Low was a philanthropist and had been very generous in contributing to Anti-Japanese invasion of China during the late 1930s. He was elected as Chairman of the Hulu Langat District Nanyang Homeland Aid Committee (Nanyang Huaqiao Chouzhenhui). Besides his commitment in providing aid to war victims in his homeland, he was the main contributor to the reconstruction of Yu Hua School which was completed in 1918. Today, Yu Hua School Hall is named in his honor. He was also perceived as aides to the British colonialist government in settling dispute within local community and assisted the authority in local development. He was honored Justice of Peace by the Queen besides naming the road in front of Yu Hua School as Low Ti Kok Road or Jalan Low Ti Kok.

Mr. Low passed away in 1942 at his house in Hong Bee Estate in Sungai Jelok. A Grand Funeral procession was carried out after the Japanese surrendered in 1945. His body was buried in the Hokkien Cemetery just behind Kajang High School. Today, the Hulu Langat Hokkien Association building standing along Jalan Timur was formerly the mansion of the late Low Ti Kok, JP."

1907: Kedai Biskut Xin Kwong Sang Woh

“Step onto the bustling Jalan Tukang in Kajang, and you’ll discover Xin Kwong Sang Woh, an old-school biscuit shop that has been around since 1907. Serving four generations of snack lovers, this shop is basically an institution. It offers an array of snacks and biscuits, all stacked in glass jars and nostalgic tins, providing bites that’ll bring back the sweet simplicity of childhood, where every mouthful is nothing short of golden. Step into Xin Kwong Sang Woh, and the first thing that will catch your eye is the sea of timeworn tins stacked from floor to ceiling, each brimming with distinctive treats. With up to 3,000 varieties on display, the selection spans every flavour, texture, and colour you could possibly imagine. Run by the Kwong family across three generations, this biscuit shop is still staffed by familiar faces, including Siew Pak Chong, the second-generation owner who is now in his late 80s. He is often found behind the counter, enjoying banter with regulars. His son, and third-generation owners, Siew Chee Kien and Tan Bee Kien, took over in 2015, gently modernising the business while keeping its nostalgic charm intact.

1907-02-16: Permohonan J.H.M Robson b/p Loke Yew: Pemecahan Lot 4, Seksyen 7

1907-02-16: Ajuan Permohonan oleh Pegawai Daerah Ulu Langat

“District Office, Kajang, 16th February 1907.

Application from Towkay Loke Yew's attorney for division of Lot 4 Section 7 of Kajang town.

Sir, I have the honour to inform you that I have received an application from Mr.J.H.M.Robson, as attorney of Towkay Loke Yew, to have Lot 4 Section 7 of Kajang Town divided up into house lots as shown on the attached tracing.

2. I have roughly indicated on the tracing the position of the District Officer's quarters & those of the Assistant District Officer & it will be seen that if shop houses are erected on the proposed lots they will to some extent infringe on the privacy which those quarters have hitherto enjoyed.

3. The Acting Resident & Mr. Stonor, the holder of the substantive appointment of District Officer Ulu Langat, have visited the land since Mr. Robson's application was received & I think they both agree with that I have said in the preceding paragraph.

4. There is apparently nothing in the title under which the land is held empowering the Government to refuse to sanction the proposed division into building lots.

5. I would propose that the Government should resume a portion of the land amounting to eight lots on each side of the centre road, and if Towkay Loke Yew will surrender this land without compensation the Government might make and upkeep the centre road and the brick drains on either side.

6. The Resident may however wish to see the land before anything is decided. I have the honour to be, Sir, Your Obedient Servant, Sd: Cluad Severn, Ag: District Officer, Ulu Langat."

1907-03-08: Kelulusan Residen Selangor

“SR. The Resident visited the spot on Thursday last & approved of the proposed subdivisions into building lots.

2. He considered that either one lot on each side next the Semenyih Road should be resumed as in the case of the other portions of the town fronting on the same road or that seven lots on each side of the centre road should be resumed to provide room in the future for lots facing the Semenyih road with a lane behind. I do not think it is necessary to have such long lots as < 20 feet & in that case six lots would be enough to resume on each side, making room for 100 ft.lots & a 20ft. lane.

3. The centre road would be produced as I have marked on the 1(?) chain tracing enclosed & with the vote for filling in land opposite market, Kajang, $1000 (Item 52 - p. 59 ? 1907) we would begin a one chain road formation where I have hatched in red to meet the centre road eventually - this formation would for the present form a stand for gharries and tin rikishas which is much needed.

4. I would therefore ask for sanction to inform Mr Robson that the proposal to subdivide is approved and to negotiate with him as regards the price to be paid for the lots resumed whether two - or twelve or fourteen or the Resident may decide. - ? , 6.3.07.” - District Officer.

“Para 4. appd.

2. I think, as further consideration, that his lots, one on each side of the road, will be sufficient. - HCB, 8.3.07.” - Henry Conway Belfield (HCB), Residen Selangor.

"Located on the southern-most tip of Klang Valley, this Gurdwara turns 100 years old this year. Establish by two brothers settling over from India, Sardar Dhan Singh and Sardar Bhan Singh are noted to be the first Sikh settlers in the area. Sardar Bhan who was also the Justice of Peace of Selangor, along with his brother ran a bullock cart business, and soon established the Guru Nanak Rubber Estate. Built upon a swampy land, that was eventually filled up and at the end of 1922 stood a humble wooden structure. This building however was rebuilt in 1970 as it was in a state of disrepair. The current Darbar Sahib building was built at the cost of RM 45,000.00 in 1970. As recent as 2016, the Gurdwara had acquired an adjacent piece of land and built a 3 storey building that houses the PEC school, along with a library and the ground floor is used as the langgar hall. One of the Gurdwaras of stark contrasts, as it has been able to maintain the Darbar which is part of its history while still having modern amenities in the new building to serve the sanggat well."

1932: Penutupan Kajang Central Rubber Factory

This is a somewhat unsatisfactory picture of the largest rubber factory in Malaya, the Kajang Central Rubber Factory. The premises and plant have been enlarged since this photograph was taken, but it does give some indication of the extensive area covered by the factory. It produces only crepe, and the members of the group of estates which owns the factory have decided that it will pay them to produce sheet rubber on their own estates. Consequently the factory will stop making crepe next month and will close down altogether in June.

These are some of the thirty-seven creping machines with which the factory is equipped. The output during the hectic years of 1926 and 1927 was enormous.

The power plant of the factory is a 150 h.p. Diesel engine. If there were more central factories in the rubber areas of Malaya the cost of preparing Malayan rubber for the manufacturer might be reduced.

"A JOURNAL IN THE FEDERAL CAPITAL").

"The largest rubber factory in Malaya will close down in June. This unparalleled slump, which has made so many changes in the agricultural and economic aspects of the rubber-growing industry in the last two years, is about to overcome the most ambitious enterprise in factory practice which this country has yet seen. At the height of the boom some years ago the Central Rubber Factory at Kajang, Selangor, was producing nearly half a million pounds of crepe a month, contributed by twelve estates representing fifteen thousand acres of planted rubber. The factory is equipped with thirty-seven heavy machines arranged in three batteries and driven by a 150 h.p. Diesel engine. When the drying sheds are full there is enough crepe hanging in them to stretch from Kajang to Singapore. Those are a few vivid facts which show the size of the factory, and anyone who knows the mechanical equipment of an average Malayan estate, consisting mainly of a few small mangles driven by a five h.p. engine, will not need to be told how far apart from ordinary practice the Central Rubber Factory stands. There are, of course, a few other large factories in Malaya. The F.M.S. Rubber Company, also in the Kajang district, as a well-known one serving their own estates, and the Dunlop Company is adopting the group principle, but the Central Rubber Factory is by far the largest in the country.

Considering how recently it is that planters have taken any great interest in the radical reorganisation of factories, it is surprising to find that the Central Rubber Factory was opened as far back as 1911, thanks in the main to the Kindersley brothers, pioneer planters in the Kajang district. It was enlarged from time to time and when it was running on full production several years ago it was owned by a group of six estates and received the output of another six. Two of the partners in the enterprise have closed down as a result of the slump and the other four have decided to make sheet instead of crepe rubber, and to make it on their own estates. Consequently there will soon be no work for the central factory to do. One does not want to enter into technicalities of the various processes by which the latex of the rubber tree is turned into a substance convenient for shipping and suited to the requirements of the manufacturer. Suffice it to say that Mr. John Hands, manager of the Central Rubber Factory, believes that, allowing for the premium on crepe rubber, its manufacture is still worth while, and that those estates which continue to make crepe will reap their reward later on, when the supply of crepe will have diminished and the market will be even more glutted with sheet-rubber than it is already. Naturally the companies which have built smoke-houses rather than continue to make crepe in the Central Factory hold the contrary opinion. But it is a matter for experts, and may be left to them."
